

Code of Conduct

Company: Northstar Mobility

Category: Ethics and Workplace Conduct

Policy Owner: Legal and People Operations

Effective Date: January 1, 2026

Document Type: Employee-facing HR policy reference

Concern Type	Reporting Channel
Harassment	Manager or People Operations
Ethics issue	Ethics reporting channel
Security concern	Security team
Legal issue	Legal department

1. Our Commitment

Northstar Mobility is committed to lawful, ethical, respectful, and accountable business conduct.

Every employee is responsible for acting with integrity, speaking up about concerns, and protecting the trust of colleagues, customers, suppliers, and communities.

Leaders have an additional responsibility to model ethical behavior and respond promptly to concerns.

Employee guidance: keep related approvals, requests, receipts, or reports in the designated company system so decisions can be reviewed consistently.

Manager guidance: managers must apply this policy consistently, document exceptions, and consult the policy owner before approving any action that could create compliance, pay, privacy, security, or employee-relations risk.

Review standard: policy questions should be resolved using the current HR policy library, applicable law, and written guidance from the policy owner. Informal past practice does not override the approved policy.

2. Respectful Workplace

Employees must treat colleagues, candidates, customers, vendors, and visitors with respect and professionalism.

Harassment, discrimination, bullying, intimidation, slurs, unwanted conduct, or exclusion based on protected characteristics are prohibited.

Employees report behavior that undermines a safe and inclusive workplace.

Employee guidance: keep related approvals, requests, receipts, or reports in the designated company system so decisions can be reviewed consistently.

Manager guidance: managers must apply this policy consistently, document exceptions, and consult the policy owner before approving any action that could create compliance, pay, privacy, security, or employee-relations risk.

Review standard: policy questions should be resolved using the current HR policy library, applicable law, and written guidance from the policy owner. Informal past practice does not override the approved policy.

3. Anti-Harassment and Non-Discrimination

The company prohibits harassment or discrimination based on legally protected characteristics, including race, color, religion, sex, pregnancy, sexual orientation, gender identity, national origin, age, disability, veteran status, genetic information, or any other protected status.

Prohibited harassment can be verbal, physical, visual, written, digital, or environmental.

Managers who receive a concern must promptly notify People Operations or Legal.

Employee guidance: keep related approvals, requests, receipts, or reports in the designated company system so decisions can be reviewed consistently.

Manager guidance: managers must apply this policy consistently, document exceptions, and consult the policy owner before approving any action that could create compliance, pay, privacy, security, or employee-relations risk.

Review standard: policy questions should be resolved using the current HR policy library, applicable law, and written guidance from the policy owner. Informal past practice does not override the approved policy.

4. Conflicts of Interest

Employees must avoid situations where personal interests conflict or appear to conflict with company interests.

Examples include supervising a relative, accepting improper gifts, holding outside employment that interferes with company duties, or having a financial interest in a supplier decision.

Potential conflicts must be disclosed through the conflict disclosure process before the employee acts on the matter.

Employee guidance: keep related approvals, requests, receipts, or reports in the designated company system so decisions can be reviewed consistently.

Manager guidance: managers must apply this policy consistently, document exceptions, and consult the policy owner before approving any action that could create compliance, pay, privacy, security, or employee-relations risk.

Review standard: policy questions should be resolved using the current HR policy library, applicable law, and written guidance from the policy owner. Informal past practice does not override the approved policy.

5. Gifts and Business Courtesies

Employees may accept modest business courtesies that are infrequent, lawful, transparent, and not intended to influence decisions.

Cash, cash equivalents, lavish gifts, and gifts during active procurement decisions are prohibited.

Government official interactions are subject to stricter anti-corruption rules and require Legal guidance.

Employee guidance: keep related approvals, requests, receipts, or reports in the designated company system so decisions can be reviewed consistently.

Manager guidance: managers must apply this policy consistently, document exceptions, and consult the policy owner before approving any action that could create compliance, pay, privacy, security, or employee-relations risk.

Review standard: policy questions should be resolved using the current HR policy library, applicable law, and written guidance from the policy owner. Informal past practice does not override the approved policy.

6. Confidential Information

Employees must protect confidential business information, employee data, customer data, technical information, pricing, strategy, and unreleased product plans.

Confidential information may be shared only with authorized people who have a legitimate business need.

Confidentiality obligations continue after employment ends.

Employee guidance: keep related approvals, requests, receipts, or reports in the designated company system so decisions can be reviewed consistently.

Manager guidance: managers must apply this policy consistently, document exceptions, and consult the policy owner before approving any action that could create compliance, pay, privacy, security, or employee-relations risk.

Review standard: policy questions should be resolved using the current HR policy library, applicable law, and written guidance from the policy owner. Informal past practice does not override the approved policy.

7. Accurate Records

Employees must create and maintain accurate business records, including time records, expense reports, quality records, financial data, and customer documentation.

Falsifying records, hiding errors, backdating approvals, or misclassifying expenses is prohibited.

Records must be retained or disposed of according to the records retention schedule and legal hold notices.

Employee guidance: keep related approvals, requests, receipts, or reports in the designated company system so decisions can be reviewed consistently.

Manager guidance: managers must apply this policy consistently, document exceptions, and consult the policy owner before approving any action that could create compliance, pay, privacy, security, or employee-relations risk.

Review standard: policy questions should be resolved using the current HR policy library, applicable law, and written guidance from the policy owner. Informal past practice does not override the approved policy.

8. Reporting Concerns

Employees may report concerns to their manager, People Operations, Legal, Security, Internal Audit, or the ethics reporting channel.

Reports may be made anonymously where permitted by law.

Employees provide as much detail as possible, including dates, names, documents, and relevant systems.

Employee guidance: keep related approvals, requests, receipts, or reports in the designated company system so decisions can be reviewed consistently.

Manager guidance: managers must apply this policy consistently, document exceptions, and consult the policy owner before approving any action that could create compliance, pay, privacy, security, or employee-relations risk.

Review standard: policy questions should be resolved using the current HR policy library, applicable law, and written guidance from the policy owner. Informal past practice does not override the approved policy.

9. Non-Retaliation

Northstar prohibits retaliation against anyone who raises a concern in good faith, participates in an investigation, or refuses to engage in improper conduct.

Retaliation includes termination, demotion, schedule changes, threats, exclusion, intimidation, or other adverse treatment because of protected reporting activity.

Suspected retaliation should be reported immediately.

Employee guidance: keep related approvals, requests, receipts, or reports in the designated company system so decisions can be reviewed consistently.

Manager guidance: managers must apply this policy consistently, document exceptions, and consult the policy owner before approving any action that could create compliance, pay, privacy, security, or employee-relations risk.

Review standard: policy questions should be resolved using the current HR policy library, applicable law, and written guidance from the policy owner. Informal past practice does not override the approved policy.

10. Investigations and Accountability

The company reviews reported concerns fairly, promptly, and as confidentially as practical.

Employees must cooperate honestly in investigations and must not interfere with evidence, witnesses, or systems.

Violations may result in corrective action up to and including termination.

Employee guidance: keep related approvals, requests, receipts, or reports in the designated company system so decisions can be reviewed consistently.

Manager guidance: managers must apply this policy consistently, document exceptions, and consult the policy owner before approving any action that could create compliance, pay, privacy, security, or employee-relations risk.

Review standard: policy questions should be resolved using the current HR policy library, applicable law, and written guidance from the policy owner. Informal past practice does not override the approved policy.

Acknowledgement and Questions

Employees are responsible for reading this policy and following the standards that apply to their role and location. Questions should be directed to the policy owner or People Operations before taking action when requirements are unclear.

This policy may be updated periodically. The current approved version in the HR policy library controls over printed or downloaded copies.