1. Purpose and Scope

This policy explains paid and unpaid leave programs available to eligible employees.

Leave benefits can differ by country, state, province, union agreement, or statutory requirement. When law provides greater benefits, the legal requirement controls.

Employees submit leave requests as early as possible so managers can plan coverage.

Employee guidance: keep related approvals, requests, receipts, or reports in the designated company system so decisions can be reviewed consistently.

Manager guidance: managers must apply this policy consistently, document exceptions, and consult the policy owner before approving any action that could create compliance, pay, privacy, security, or employee-relations risk.

Review standard: policy questions should be resolved using the current HR policy library, applicable law, and written guidance from the policy owner. Informal past practice does not override the approved policy.

2. Vacation Leave

Regular full-time employees accrue 15 vacation days per calendar year during their first, second, and third years of continuous employment.

Beginning on the first day of the fourth year of continuous employment, regular full-time employees accrue 20 vacation days per calendar year.

Employees request vacation at least two weeks in advance for absences of three or more consecutive business days.

Employee guidance: keep related approvals, requests, receipts, or reports in the designated company system so decisions can be reviewed consistently.

Manager guidance: managers must apply this policy consistently, document exceptions, and consult the policy owner before approving any action that could create compliance, pay, privacy, security, or employee-relations risk.

Review standard: policy questions should be resolved using the current HR policy library, applicable law, and written guidance from the policy owner. Informal past practice does not override the approved policy.

3. Sick Leave

Regular full-time employees receive 10 paid sick days per calendar year, available for personal illness, preventive care, medical appointments, or care of an eligible family member.

Employees notify their manager before the start of the workday when using unscheduled sick leave.

Medical certification may be required for absences longer than three consecutive workdays or when allowed by law.

Employee guidance: keep related approvals, requests, receipts, or reports in the designated company system so decisions can be reviewed consistently.

Manager guidance: managers must apply this policy consistently, document exceptions, and consult the policy owner before approving any action that could create compliance, pay, privacy, security, or employee-relations risk.

Review standard: policy questions should be resolved using the current HR policy library, applicable law, and written guidance from the policy owner. Informal past practice does not override the approved policy.

4. Holidays

Northstar publishes the annual holiday calendar before the start of each calendar year.

Employees required to work on a company holiday may receive holiday pay, an alternate day off, or another arrangement based on role classification and local law.

Floating holidays may be used for personal, cultural, religious, or wellness observances with manager approval.

Employee guidance: keep related approvals, requests, receipts, or reports in the designated company system so decisions can be reviewed consistently.

Manager guidance: managers must apply this policy consistently, document exceptions, and consult the policy owner before approving any action that could create compliance, pay, privacy, security, or employee-relations risk.

Review standard: policy questions should be resolved using the current HR policy library, applicable law, and written guidance from the policy owner. Informal past practice does not override the approved policy.

5. Parental Leave

Eligible birth, adoptive, and foster parents may receive up to 12 weeks of job-protected parental leave.

Primary caregivers may be eligible for up to 8 weeks of paid parental leave. Non-primary caregivers may be eligible for up to 4 weeks of paid parental leave.

Employees provide at least 30 days of notice when the need for parental leave is foreseeable.

Employee guidance: keep related approvals, requests, receipts, or reports in the designated company system so decisions can be reviewed consistently.

Manager guidance: managers must apply this policy consistently, document exceptions, and consult the policy owner before approving any action that could create compliance, pay, privacy, security, or employee-relations risk.

Review standard: policy questions should be resolved using the current HR policy library, applicable law, and written guidance from the policy owner. Informal past practice does not override the approved policy.

6. Bereavement Leave

Employees may take up to 5 paid business days after the death of an immediate family member.

Employees may take up to 2 paid business days after the death of an extended family member.

Additional unpaid time or vacation may be approved for travel, estate matters, cultural practices, or exceptional circumstances.

Employee guidance: keep related approvals, requests, receipts, or reports in the designated company system so decisions can be reviewed consistently.

Manager guidance: managers must apply this policy consistently, document exceptions, and consult the policy owner before approving any action that could create compliance, pay, privacy, security, or employee-relations risk.

Review standard: policy questions should be resolved using the current HR policy library, applicable law, and written guidance from the policy owner. Informal past practice does not override the approved policy.

7. Jury Duty and Witness Leave

Employees summoned for jury duty or required court witness service should notify their manager and People Operations as soon as possible.

The company will provide paid jury duty leave for up to 10 business days unless local law requires more.

Employees should return to work when released early from court service during normal working hours.

Employee guidance: keep related approvals, requests, receipts, or reports in the designated company system so decisions can be reviewed consistently.

Manager guidance: managers must apply this policy consistently, document exceptions, and consult the policy owner before approving any action that could create compliance, pay, privacy, security, or employee-relations risk.

Review standard: policy questions should be resolved using the current HR policy library, applicable law, and written guidance from the policy owner. Informal past practice does not override the approved policy.

8. Medical and Family Leave

Employees may be eligible for statutory medical or family leave programs based on location, tenure, hours worked, and qualifying reason.

People Operations will provide required notices, certification forms, and benefit continuation guidance.

Employees must cooperate with reasonable certification, recertification, and return-to-work requirements.

Employee guidance: keep related approvals, requests, receipts, or reports in the designated company system so decisions can be reviewed consistently.

Review standard: policy questions should be resolved using the current HR policy library, applicable law, and written guidance from the policy owner. Informal past practice does not override the approved policy.

9. Unpaid Personal Leave

Unpaid personal leave may be approved when business needs allow and paid leave options are exhausted or not applicable.

Requests must explain the reason, expected duration, and proposed return date.

Benefits during unpaid leave depend on plan terms and applicable law.

Employee guidance: keep related approvals, requests, receipts, or reports in the designated company system so decisions can be reviewed consistently.

Manager guidance: managers must apply this policy consistently, document exceptions, and consult the policy owner before approving any action that could create compliance, pay, privacy, security, or employee-relations risk.

Review standard: policy questions should be resolved using the current HR policy library, applicable law, and written guidance from the policy owner. Informal past practice does not override the approved policy.

10. Return from Leave

Employees must confirm their return date with their manager and People Operations before returning from leave.

A fitness-for-duty certification may be required when returning from medical leave if permitted by law.

Failure to return from approved leave without communication may be treated as job abandonment.

Employee guidance: keep related approvals, requests, receipts, or reports in the designated company system so decisions can be reviewed consistently.
