1. Purpose

This policy defines how eligible employees may work remotely while maintaining productivity, data security, collaboration, and employee well-being.

Remote work is a work arrangement, not a separate benefit guarantee. Business needs, role requirements, performance, and security obligations determine eligibility.

Approved remote work can be hybrid, occasional, temporary, or fully remote depending on the role and written approval.

Employee guidance: keep related approvals, requests, receipts, or reports in the designated company system so decisions can be reviewed consistently.

Manager guidance: managers must apply this policy consistently, document exceptions, and consult the policy owner before approving any action that could create compliance, pay, privacy, security, or employee-relations risk.

Review standard: policy questions should be resolved using the current HR policy library, applicable law, and written guidance from the policy owner. Informal past practice does not override the approved policy.

2. Eligibility

Employees must have satisfactory performance, reliable attendance, a role suitable for remote work, and a secure work environment.

Roles requiring physical equipment, secure labs, direct facilities support, or on-site customer operations are limited or ineligible unless leadership approves an exception.

New employees become eligible for recurring remote work after the introductory period unless the offer letter states otherwise.

Employee guidance: keep related approvals, requests, receipts, or reports in the designated company system so decisions can be reviewed consistently.

Manager guidance: managers must apply this policy consistently, document exceptions, and consult the policy owner before approving any action that could create compliance, pay, privacy, security, or employee-relations risk.

Review standard: policy questions should be resolved using the current HR policy library, applicable law, and written guidance from the policy owner. Informal past practice does not override the approved policy.

3. Hybrid Schedule

Hybrid employees are expected to work on-site at least three days per week unless their department has an approved exception.

Core collaboration hours are 10:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. local team time. Employees must be reachable during core hours.

Managers can require in-office attendance for onboarding, planning, performance meetings, customer events, audits, or urgent business needs.

Employee guidance: keep related approvals, requests, receipts, or reports in the designated company system so decisions can be reviewed consistently.

Manager guidance: managers must apply this policy consistently, document exceptions, and consult the policy owner before approving any action that could create compliance, pay, privacy, security, or employee-relations risk.

Review standard: policy questions should be resolved using the current HR policy library, applicable law, and written guidance from the policy owner. Informal past practice does not override the approved policy.

4. Approval Process

Employees request remote work through the HR service portal with proposed schedule, location, equipment needs, and manager approval.

Recurring arrangements must be reviewed at least every six months. Changes in role, performance, location, or team needs may require reapproval.

Remote work from another country or state requires advance approval from People Operations, Tax, Legal, and IT Security.

Employee guidance: keep related approvals, requests, receipts, or reports in the designated company system so decisions can be reviewed consistently.

Manager guidance: managers must apply this policy consistently, document exceptions, and consult the policy owner before approving any action that could create compliance, pay, privacy, security, or employee-relations risk.

Review standard: policy questions should be resolved using the current HR policy library, applicable law, and written guidance from the policy owner. Informal past practice does not override the approved policy.

5. Workspace and Equipment

Employees must maintain a safe, quiet, and ergonomically suitable workspace with reliable internet.

Company laptops, approved monitors, headsets, and security tools must be used for company work. Personal devices may not store confidential company data.

Employees are responsible for normal home utility costs unless a written regional policy provides otherwise.

Employee guidance: keep related approvals, requests, receipts, or reports in the designated company system so decisions can be reviewed consistently.

Manager guidance: managers must apply this policy consistently, document exceptions, and consult the policy owner before approving any action that could create compliance, pay, privacy, security, or employee-relations risk.

Review standard: policy questions should be resolved using the current HR policy library, applicable law, and written guidance from the policy owner. Informal past practice does not override the approved policy.

6. Communication Standards

Employees must keep calendar availability current, attend required meetings, respond to messages within reasonable business time, and use video for high-context discussions when it improves clarity.

Team decisions, action items, and approvals are documented in shared systems so remote and on-site employees have equal access to information.

Managers set clear expectations for response times, meeting norms, and focus work blocks.

Employee guidance: keep related approvals, requests, receipts, or reports in the designated company system so decisions can be reviewed consistently.

Manager guidance: managers must apply this policy consistently, document exceptions, and consult the policy owner before approving any action that could create compliance, pay, privacy, security, or employee-relations risk.

Review standard: policy questions should be resolved using the current HR policy library, applicable law, and written guidance from the policy owner. Informal past practice does not override the approved policy.

7. Security Requirements

Remote employees must use VPN or approved zero-trust access where required, lock screens when away, and protect devices from family members, visitors, and unauthorized users.

Confidential discussions should not be held in public areas where they can be overheard.

Printed confidential material at home must be minimized and shredded when no longer needed.

Employee guidance: keep related approvals, requests, receipts, or reports in the designated company system so decisions can be reviewed consistently.

Manager guidance: managers must apply this policy consistently, document exceptions, and consult the policy owner before approving any action that could create compliance, pay, privacy, security, or employee-relations risk.

Review standard: policy questions should be resolved using the current HR policy library, applicable law, and written guidance from the policy owner. Informal past practice does not override the approved policy.

8. Performance and Availability

Remote employees are measured by outcomes, quality, collaboration, timeliness, and policy compliance.

Remote work can be modified or revoked when performance, attendance, responsiveness, confidentiality, or collaboration expectations are not met.

Employees must not provide dependent care as a substitute for working time during scheduled hours.

Employee guidance: keep related approvals, requests, receipts, or reports in the designated company system so decisions can be reviewed consistently.

Manager guidance: managers must apply this policy consistently, document exceptions, and consult the policy owner before approving any action that could create compliance, pay, privacy, security, or employee-relations risk.

Review standard: policy questions should be resolved using the current HR policy library, applicable law, and written guidance from the policy owner. Informal past practice does not override the approved policy.

9. Travel to Office

Employees who choose to live far from their assigned office are normally responsible for travel costs to attend required on-site meetings.

Company-paid travel may be approved when the business specifically requires an employee to travel from an approved remote work location.

Travel time and expense reimbursement follow the Travel and Expense Policy.

Employee guidance: keep related approvals, requests, receipts, or reports in the designated company system so decisions can be reviewed consistently.

Manager guidance: managers must apply this policy consistently, document exceptions, and consult the policy owner before approving any action that could create compliance, pay, privacy, security, or employee-relations risk.

Review standard: policy questions should be resolved using the current HR policy library, applicable law, and written guidance from the policy owner. Informal past practice does not override the approved policy.

10. Health and Safety

Employees must report work-related injuries that occur during remote work hours immediately to their manager and People Operations.

Remote workspaces may be reviewed through self-certification or virtual assessment when required for safety, security, or accommodation reasons.

Employees should take meal and rest breaks consistent with local law and company guidance.

Employee guidance: keep related approvals, requests, receipts, or reports in the designated company system so decisions can be reviewed consistently.

Manager guidance: managers must apply this policy consistently, document exceptions, and consult the policy owner before approving any action that could create compliance, pay, privacy, security, or employee-relations risk.

Review standard: policy questions should be resolved using the current HR policy library, applicable law, and written guidance from the policy owner. Informal past practice does not override the approved policy.

Acknowledgement and Questions

Employees are responsible for reading this policy and following the standards that apply to their role and location. Questions should be directed to the policy owner or People Operations before taking action when requirements are unclear.

This policy may be updated periodically. The current approved version in the HR policy library controls over printed or downloaded copies.
